Faces of Boys of This Section

Although the line of boys waiting to enter the Grand Theatre for a special Boys' Week program was more than two blocks in length, it took but a few minutes for the crowd of wide-awake sure-enough boys to pass through the portals of that play house this morning.

Combined efforts of Edward Lynn and Howard E. James to stem the tide of hilarious and youthful humanity were futile, and the two were pushed aside as boys of all sizes, together with an occasional dog, rushed in.

Spectators lining the opposite side of the street, admitted to more than their money's worth, as they watched some of the lads doing their best at "fathering" the younger brothers, and others sneaking into line when the opportunity presented itself.

Voices of the men in charge as they shouted commands were unheard two feet away and they gave up. They realized it was Boys' Day indeed.

Scouts, cubs and just plain boys vied for front row seats, but all were in the best of moods even when forced to give in. Merriment was at hand.

When the din subsided, Edward Lynn, manager of the theatre and host to the boys for the morning, introduced Percy G. Ford who had charge of the song program. The youngsters filled the vast auditorium with the words of "America" and well pleased with the rendition, voiced their approval of their own efforts in a round of applause. Then, one old time song after another was rendered.

From peppy ditties to songs of long ago did the choice of selections of the harmonica players range, as six boys vied for honors in the contest.

The six contestants expressed their keen love of the instrument and music by the manner in which they entered into the affair.

Seated upon the platform the four judges found it difficult to choose those who showed mastery of the mouth organ. The judges were Emil Metzger, Joseph H. Spencer, Thomas H. Snellson and Doron Green.

Prizes were awarded in the following:

First, John Dougherty, silver cup; second, J. Arceseles; third, William Halpin; fourth, Samuel LaRosa.

Prizes of month organs were given to those awarded second, third and fourth honors, and also to the other two contestants, Leo Chicolette and Robert Moore.

Winners in the poster contest were given their prizes as follows:

First, Harold Snyder, $10 in gold; second, James Morrow, $7.50; third, Charles Locke, $5.

CANDIDATES ENDEAVORING TO GET IN EVERY SUBSCRIPTION BY MONDAY

Everyone Putting Forth Best
Efforts As First Period
Close Nears

"Now or Never" seems to be the slogan many candidates have adopted in The Courier's $10,000 Gold Gift campaign, and as a result these seekers after the big bags of gold are bending every effort to have a good report in at campaign headquarters tonight and another one Monday night before 10 o'clock, the closing time of the first period.

Votes count so much more until that time that it is expected that no serious-minded candidate will permit Monday night to pass without getting in every subscription possible.

Monday night's vote casting will, in all probability, show who is who in the big gold drive, and with less than a month to go, one does not wonder that the workers are showing their true stride these days.

Extensions Valuable

Candidates are urged to take advantage of the extension business to be had at this time—a second year obtained now will give double the regular schedule of votes—in other words it becomes a two-year subscription, and as a result the extra votes are earned.

Then, too, candidates should bear in mind the fact that there are hundreds and hundreds of folks who have not given any subscription whatsoever; the workers will surely obtain these, or most of them, at once. Do not delay, but get in and get your share of these untouched subscriptions.

Campaign headquarters, located at 312 Mill street, will be open until 10 o'clock, tonight to receive subscriptions and issue supplies. Also until ten o'clock Monday night—the last hour of the First Period.

BURLINGTON GIRL, OUT OF WORK, TAKES POISON

Is Found On Bathroom Floor
By Girl Friend
Visitor

CONDITION NOT SERIOUS

BURLINGTON, N. J., May 9.—Mary Subliski, 17 years old, of 418 St. Mary's street, attempted to commit suicide early last evening by drinking poison because, police say, she had been unable to secure work.

The girl, who is said to have tried to end her life during the absence of her parents, was found lying in the bathroom by a girl friend who, upon calling for a visit, failed to receive any response to her knocking and walked into the house.

The girl was rushed to the Burlington Emergency Hospital in the police patrol and after treatment was taken back to her home. Her parents told the police she had been despondent for some time because of inability to find employment.

FLOWERING COUNTRYSIDE ATTRACTS MOTORISTS

Apple Orchards of Shenandoah Valley Present Enticing Picture

A COLORFUL SPECTACLE

In addition to its hillside alive with blossoming dogwood, azaleas and mountain laurel the famous Shenandoah Valley presents an entrancing picture of loveliness in Maytime with its thousands of apple orchards in full bloom in the vicinity of Winchester.

To this delightful section of the Old Dominion, the Keystone Automobile Club has mapped an attractive motor tour for the benefit of tourists desiring to attend the annual Shenandoah Valley Apple Blossom Festival.

"This colorful outdoor spectacle is attracting increasing throngs each year and presents a sight that will long be remembered," says Russell B. Carty, representative of the club. "The homeward journey can be made over winding highways leading through the highly scenic Harpers Ferry region and the historic section of Frederick. The round trip covers approximately 400 miles."

From Bristol the tour leads over the Lincoln Highway over City Line avenue to Overbrook. Here a right turn leads westward over U. S. Route 30, through Paoli, Coatesville, Lancaster and York to Gettysburg. Here a right turn into state route 166 carries the travelers through Fairfield to Zora where a right turn is made into state route 16 leading to Waynesboro.

From this point the state highway is followed through Petersburg to Hagerstown where U. S. Route 11 is met. This excellent well paved highway is used southward through Martinsburg to Winchester.

It has long been debated when the Winchester region is fairest, whether in Maytime when white and pink and fragrant, or in September when it presents a delightful picture in red, green and gold with its realized abundant apple crop. If the brilliant orchard spectacle is considered in conjunction with the Apple Blossom Festival, when all the beauty and chivalry of Virginia's fair valley foregather in parade and pageant, then the decision must be cast in favor of Maytime.

Winchester's annual apple blossom fête, with its lavish entertainment, colorful parades, gaily decorated floats is generally a two day spectacle capped with a pageant in which "Queen Shenandoah" is crowned in the presence of throngs of visitors and participants. More than 4000 orchards, many of them ranging into hundreds of acres produce more than 1,000,000 barrels of luscious fruit each year in this locality. In addition to its apple blossom fête Winchester provides an historic interest always of interest to visitors.

In pre-Revolutionary days it was the capital of the Northern Neck of Virginia, comprising fourteen counties and was the lordly domain of Thomas Lord Fairfax. It was for this nobleman that George Washington, at the age of 16, did much surveying work near Winchester. Here too stands the remains of historic Fort Loudoun, erected by Washington as a frontier outpost. Hessian prisoners of war were quartered here during the Revolution and during the Civil War the city changed hands seventy-two times during the First Period.

Walter Towle rendered two whistling solos. Mr. Andrews showed great talent as a magician. Mr. Andrews sang "She's A Gorgeous Thing." DUTCH VIEWS SHOWN

With "Flowers are the sweetest things that God ever made and forgot to put a soul into" as the thought for the day, Travel Club members thoroughly enjoyed a nature meeting and flower exchange at the club home yesterday afternoon.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Griffith L. Williams, who introduced Miss Jacoba VanSluys. Miss VanSluys, a native of the Netherlands, gave an illustrated talk on "Homes and Gardens of Holland."

The folklore of her native land was woven into the enlightening and friendly discourse, as Miss VanSluys made comments on the numerous colored slides shown. The pictures included interiors and exteriors of the more modern and the older homes of (Continued on Page 4)

MOTHERHOOD WILL BE HONORED BY THOSE WHO ATTEND SERVICES IN THE CHURCHES TOMORROW; WILL REVERE MOTHER IN SERMON AND SONG

"Mothers' Day Should Be A Church-Going Sunday," Says
Rev. Howard L. Zepp—Solos and Group Song
Numbers at Some Edifices

Motherhood, the most holy service given, and freely and willingly given, by women, is to be honored tomorrow. Christian motherhood is to have a day set apart for it this Sunday—a day when real mothers, those who have the well-being of their children and mankind at heart, is to be revered.

Pastors will preach upon these themes, with Motherhood which is honored the entire year, being given especial consideration and reverence tomorrow.

First Baptist Church
Rev. Howard L. Zepp, pastor of the First Baptist Church, says: "Some years ago we found that people, who ordinarily came to church, stayed away on Mothers' Day. Something was certainly wrong. We inquired, and were told that Mothers' Day made them sad, so they stayed away from services."

"If Mothers' Day services keep people away from church, we had better drop them. On the contrary, Mothers' Day should be a church-going Sunday. Not a sentimental observance but a constructive celebration."

BOY PREFERS BASEBALL TO PUBLIC OFFICE

Refuses to Leave Diamond to Become "Borough Engineer"

THREE TAKE THE OATH

That a boy much prefers to play baseball to occupying public office was demonstrated yesterday afternoon when the four Bristol boys named to borough offices were to take the oath of office and guide the municipality for an hour.

Peter Bornice, named as borough engineer, did not report for duty but stayed at the high school diamond, and played against the Newtown nine.

The other three boys, however, were on hand at three o'clock, the designated hour. They were escorted to the council chamber by Emil Metzger, chairman of Boys' Week committee.

It was impossible for Burgess Anderson to be present to administer the oath, so he deputized Superintendent of Public Safety, James L. McGee, to act in his place.

The first boy to take the oath of office was Franklin Fine, who received the highest number of votes cast and was chosen as Burgess.

Wayne Fry was next sworn in as chief of police and Leonard Bassett took the oath as superintendent of public safety.

Each official was sworn in separately and repeated the oath, word for word, after McGee.

The newly inducted officials were congratulated upon assuming office and John S. Roberts, Jr., escorted Fine to the office of Burgess on the first floor of the municipal building.

Emil Metzger took Fry to the office of Chief of Police and McGee took Bassett in charge.

The boys were instructed in the duties required of the men who really do occupy the offices and they officiated for an hour.

Some telephone calls were received and answered by the boys and they received first-hand knowledge as to the duties of the borough officials who they were impersonating.

Operation of the police switchboard was explained to Fry and just about the time he took charge of it there were a large number of calls received. A report also came in that a boy had run away from home and Fry along with Chief Jones went out on this call, visited the parents and obtained the information.

"On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, our topic will be: 'Why the United States has the highest maternity death rate of twenty-two civilized countries.'"

"The fact that in America we execute ten thousand women a year for the crime of being mothers, is not the kind of sentiment that brings tears. In response to the appeal of the United States Public Health Service, let us celebrate this Mother's Day constructively by facing the challenging need for a more adequate maternity care for mothers and a nationwide campaign of education for expectant mothers."

"Jesus said: 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' Thus only is our Christianity evidenced. Here is something practical, not merely sentimental. Knitted brows are more constructive than emotional tears in a crusade to make safe the holiest service a woman can render to mankind."

Sunday School will be at 10 a. m.; B. Y. P. U., 7 p. m.; evening worship, 7.45.

A NEW REPUBLIC

Spain has had growing pains. Almost overnight it has changed from a country of gay bull fighters and picturesque dancing señoritas to a country of modern cities, from an agricultural to an industrial land. Now she has come into her political maturity by discarding the old outworn monarchical form of government for the more modern republican form.

The old Spain was more or less content with a king. The new Spain found life under an absolute monarchy stifling and intolerable. King Alfonso the last of the Bourbons, was more benevolent than other members of that ruling family, but his benevolence and progressiveness—he is a great admirer of the United States and the American people—could not make up for the fatal defects of the system of which he was a part.

Alfonso must have seen the inevitable. He has long talked of visiting the United States, something he probably never would have done while on the throne. And he was too shrewd to fight the inevitable to the end. It was he, not the republicans, who made the Spanish revolution a bloodless one. When he permitted the popular election which resulted in his abdication, he probably was looking ahead to the possible collapse of the young republic, through maladministration by corrupt and power-drunk politicians, and his recall to rule. Spain's exiled king was no figurehead, and as a shrewd politician probably had no superior in that country.

SELLING THE WHEAT

The Federal Farm Board is selling in Europe at better than world prices part of the wheat it purchased last year to keep domestic prices up. The higher prices are due to the superiority of the wheat.

In disposing of its holdings at this time the board is taking advantage of the best marketing conditions in 18 months. It waited for this opportunity and struck at the right hour. Early sales involved seven million bushels.

European wheat sellers will not attempt reprisals out of resentment for this invasion of American wheat, since they cannot equal the quality and are selling under the price the imported grain is bringing. Thus has been proved the wisdom of the board's policy of buying wheat of superior quality.

While the board would have liked to sell its wheat for what it paid for it, it knew all along that this would be little short of the miraculous and is satisfied that the loss it is taking represents money well spent in saving the wheat country from bankruptcy and the country from even greater depression and unemployment than now prevails.

It is imperative to the future usefulness and efficiency of the board that the nation understands that what was done for the farmers was done for the good of all. In prosperity we will stand together, in depression fall together.

What you think of yourself doesn't count until you prove it.

Following the crash of his plane in John Marbury's Florida orange grove, young and wealthy Dave Ordway is content with the peaceful life on the plantation that is a contrast to his former pleasure-seeking existence. Adventure awaits him here, however. Mueller, brutal owner of the adjoining grove, is trying to force his attentions upon Joan. He robs Dave and burns his plane because Dave refuses his demands for damage to Mueller's property in landing. Joan's cousin, Sally, who lives on the plantation, is in love with Dave, but he is more attracted by the reserved Joan. When Dave's erstwhile fiancée, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him, he is aware of the antagonism among the girls. Gerry recognizes Mueller as "Snatch" Cazzoni, a bootlegger. The boys leave to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's. They discover Mueller's liquor store. Fearing trouble Dave has Talbot return to warn the girls to stay at home.

CHAPTER XXI

TALBOT bolted toward the door, then stopped abruptly. "I promised to bring Dave some flashlights. Have you any, Miss Marbury?"

Joan and Sally had settled back in their chairs and were watching Barbara, who had just screwed another cigarette into her long red holder and was smoking with quick, nervous puffs.

"This is certainly a wow, this party you've brought me to," said Barbara, bitterly. "And to think that we missed a costume ball at the Vinoy Park."

"Don't forget you invited yourself along, Babs," retorted Talbot, heatedly. "Gerry and I were all for dashing over here and bringing Dave back with us. But no; you got all warm and uncomfortable about something and had to come, too. Well, you're here, my spoiled sweetheart, so be a good sport about it."

Truth Hurts

"This is one of your horrid nights, Talbot," she snapped. She turned to the Marbury girls with a shrug. "His manners are beastly, aren't they?"

"Honest criticism is never pleasant to hear," retorted Sally, her black eyes glinting.

Barbara's insolent stare encompassed the young girl, examining her simple wash dress, her carefully-mended silken hose, her somewhat shabby slippers. Sally, a vivid spot of color on each tanned cheek, matched her, stare for stare.

"Miss Marbury," said Talbot, hastily, "have you any flashlights you could lend us?"

Joan rose and left the room. Barbara tossed her cigarette end into a flower pot.

"I suppose I'll ruin this frock," she sighed, "but I'm tired of it, anyway."

"I'll say you'll ruin it," agreed Talbot, vindictively. "And you'll need new shoes, too. If you're going, you'll have to ankle every step of the way!"

He whirled and retreated precipitantly, slamming the door behind him. Joan returned with the flashlights just in time to hear his heavy footsteps clattering across the porch.

Hannah's portly figure was framed in the dining-room door.

"Miss Joan, is y'awl gwine out?" she asked anxiously.

Joan glanced uncertainly toward Barbara, whose hand was already upon the door knob. Sally, too, had risen and was following Barbara.

"Yes, Hannah," she said. "We'll be back in an hour or so."

Hannah untied her voluminous white apron and began to fold it. Her eyes rolled whitely and her huge mouth was set in a straight red line of determination.

"Miss Joan," she declared positively, "I enta gwine res' in dis house one little minute alone. Lawd, no! Dey's too much ruckus gwine on dis night. I'se gwine righty along wif you, I is."

Left Behind

"Let her come, Joan," laughed Sally. "We can leave her in the car while we go after the boys."

Barbara opened the door and peered out into the night. The sound of a whining motor came into the room.

"Talbot has taken the car," she said.

"It doesn't matter," said Joan. "I know where they are. We can take our Ford."

"That will be most amusing, I'm sure," purred Barbara.

Talbot, unconsciously crooning a melancholy version of Gerry's

"Are the girls all right?" interrupted Dave impatiently.

"Well, they didn't seem very chatty with each other," returned Talbot evasively. "They've been sitting around hating each other all evening. I sort of gathered the idea that they were a little bored or something."

"You get behind Gerry and see that he doesn't stray away," directed Dave. "We ought to hang a cowbell around his neck. Come on, let's go."

"Go where?" demanded Gerry, truculently. "No sense in wasting good liquor like this. I've got a fight in me. Ought to use it. Don't like the way Mueller parts his hair, or the color of his necktie, or the perfumes he's doused with. Want to tell him so. Tired of walking. Never did like to walk."

"Too bad that liquor hasn't got a silencer in it," commented Talbot, sadly. "It certainly sets Gerry to talking. If it should set him to thinking, too, no telling what might happen. Go on, now, Gerry, old man, and follow Dave before he favorite blues, was brought to a startled halt by a sibilant whisper from the adjacent underbrush.

"Shut up!" hissed Dave. "Are you practicing for a hog-calling contest? Between you and Gerry, all I need is a college cheer leader to keep the noises organized."

"Don't you pop out at me like that!" gasped Talbot. "For two cents I'd stand here and howl, I'm that nervous."

"One more yip out of you and I'll tie you and Gerry together, gag you both and turn you loose in the scrub," retorted Dave, emerging from the thicket which surrounded the nearest of the abandoned houses.

"Where's my car?" demanded Gerry, thickly, appearing from behind Dave.

"Well, well, well!" commented Talbot, admiringly. "Still schmozzed, what?"

Gerry, weaving gently, bestowed an unfavorable glance upon his stout friend.

"Where's my car?" he repeated. "Dave won't let me go find Mueller. I'm going home."

"Your car is in the road back toward Joan's. But don't worry about not finding Mueller. This is a night when my perceptions are sharp. Something tells me that we'll have an eyeful of Mueller before the sun rises."

leaves us flat."

Dave was already pushing through the underbrush, leading the way toward the black bulk which loomed over the tops of the scrub pines and young cabbage palm.

Bottles Everywhere

"The second house was jammed to the ridgepole with liquor, Talbot," he whispered. "Now we're going to have a look at the house near the county road. There's been a whale of an uproar from over by the landing field. Guess the guard got loose and set them all to rushing about looking for us. They're likely to come over this way at any moment, now."

They crossed the wide flagstone porch of the abandoned house. Palmetto scrub was pushing its way up between the flags, upending them in its remorseless, patient strength. The front door, a massive slab of pecked cypress, swung listlessly on creaking hinges of hammered iron. Within was a vast, echoing expanse of black hallway, at the other end of which was a patch of dim light, the door to the patio in the rear.

Dave groped his way along the hall, glancing into the huge, high-ceilinged rooms which stretched off to either side.

Only a Matter of a Few Hours

A few more circuits of the hour hand, and—too late! If today and Monday pass without speedy action on your part, the responsibility will rest on yourself. Long term subscriptions count most and a few such orders now from unexpected sources might prove to be the deciding factors in this race. Home and Garden Talk At Travel Club Session the Netherlands, gardens large and small, canals, wind-mills and water-mills. It was well brought out that exceptional ingenuity is necessary in order that flowers and various plants may be propagated in the many spots thus put to use. The country cross-roads, canal banks to the water's edge, and window ledges all have displays of colorful blooms.

The Hollanders, according to the one giving this informative talk, do not cut the blossoms, choosing rather to let the fragrance and beauty remain where started in order that passersby might enjoy the beauty.

The fact that flowers thrive on love and care was well driven home. Pictures showed where many small plots, beside very poor homes, were given over to flowers, rather than to much-needed vegetables.

Miss VanSluys' love for flowers was well shown in her understanding of their "language."

Other numbers included in the program outlined by Mrs. Williams were songs by six pupils of Washington street school, under direction of their instructress, Miss Grace Shaver. These songs included: "Seeds and Weeds," "Arbor Day Song," and "Star Fishing." Peggy Wildman, one of the group, recited "Calling the Violets."

A number of the club members volunteered to assist Mrs. Earl Tomb, who will have charge of "Flowers for the Flowerless" during the summer. Bouquets will be taken to Philadelphia for distribution one day each week.

The flower exchange planned for the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Earl Tomb, Mrs. Theodore Megargee and Mrs. Franklin K. Wills. Many of the club women had taken plants and choice blooms for exchange.

During the business session of which Mrs. Horace H. Burton had charge, report was made that nearly $300 has been realized from a series of card parties, which fund is for operation of two playgrounds in the borough during the summer months. Two more parties are to take place, and the goal is $500.

A canal trip has been arranged for the enjoyment of the women, this being scheduled for Friday, May 22nd. Mrs. George E. Boswell and Mrs. E. Linton Martin are outlining plans. The group will meet at Worthington's Garage, New Hope, at 10 a. m. on the date stated. There a barge will be in readiness to transport them up the canal. It is planned to visit several of the studios above New Hope. A box luncheon will be partaken of. Hostesses yesterday were Mrs. Charles T. Owens and Miss Ellen Downing.

Directors Indicted In Hilltown Case

DOYLESTOWN, May 9.—The grand jury found true bills against four school directors of Hilltown township charging malfeasance in office. Defendants are H. Warren Moyer, Arthur B. Moyer, Irvin D. Garis and Elmer S. Umstead.

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn stated today that he did not know at this time whether the directors will be tried at this term of court or not, owing to the large amount of other business, including three murder trials scheduled for trial. In the trial of the school directors, Mark Thatcher, of Perkaskie, will be the defense counsel, and Harry S. Grim, of Perkasie, will be the private counsel for the Commonwealth.

Judge Hiram H. Keller announced the appointment of Webster S. Achey, of Doylestown, and Mark Thatcher, of Perkaskie, as counsel to represent the three handits charged with the murder of Edward Gamis, proprietor of the Blue Spruce Inn. The three, William C. Snipes and Marion Ellis, of Lancaster, S. C., and John Tagg, Jr., of South Langhorne, were in the court room when the appointments were made yesterday afternoon.

NEWTOWN SCHOOL TEAM
VICTIMS OF BRISTOL HIGH

By Leon Schiffer

Bristol High's baseball team took the Newtown nine over so fast yesterday afternoon on the local field that Coach Townsend had a tougher time keeping down the score than the local boys had playing the game. The last out saw the Cardinal and Gray leading the Newtownian lambs by the score of 12 to 2.

Not only were the local boys improved in hitting but also fielding, features of the game being two double plays.

Narcisi twirled for the victors, allowing only six hits and securing eight strike-outs to his credit. Stacker hurled for the visitors and was hit freely.

Rockhill, "the mighty babe of Bristol High," led the hitting of the day, getting a single, a double and a triple, besides hammering in two runs.

The Cardinal and Gray forged into the lead in the first inning, as usual, when Rockhill, Hunter, Dougherty, Gaffney, Tosti, Pico, and Narcisi succeeded in romping home for the larger portion of Bristol's runs. From that point on the invaders never had a chance and by the end of the game an entire rookie nine had taken the field against the Blue and Gray.

Tuesday the local boys will journey to New Hope where they will play the latter's nine.

Another "Giant Killer"

By HARDIN BURNLEY

SOME old-timers demur but "Doc" Jack Kearns and many others insist that Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion, is a combination of Bob Fitzsimmons and Joe Walcott as "the fightin'est man" now active in the ring.

Of course, the aforesaid "Doc" Kearns manages Walker—manages him so much, it would seem, that he was credited with arranging the annulment of Mickey's most recent matrimonial affair. "Doc" likes 'em single when they work for him as his historic split with Jack Dempsey indicated. He claims he "made" Dempsey and he did threaten to "break" him. He appears to be something of a prophet, this Jack in the pugilistic deck, and so, when he predicts Walker will become the heavyweight king, the average Sport Bug listens without laughing comment.

Walker will be 31 years old next July and he's been battling since he was about 20. Mickey won the welter title from Jack Britton on a 15-round decision way back in 1922 and lost it to Pete Latzo after a 10-round bout in 1926. The same year, he decided Tiger Flowers in 10 for the middleweight crown. The only loss he's sustained since was when Lighthavy Tommy Loughran outpointed him in 1929.

The Rumson Bulldog usually fights out of the middle class. He and the cagey Kearns are sharply criticized for not giving Dave Shade a crack at that title. But "Doc" and Mickey are shootin' for the big money. They're after the heavies.

Walker already has whipped Johnny Risko and stopped a few other huskies not much above the calibre of Carne's fight folder. He's aiming at Sharky, Schmeling, Stribling and even the ponderous Primo.

For ten years Mickey has trounced practically all the best welters and middles and a few fair heavies and lightheavies. He's a great battler but, in the opinion of many critics, he has yet to prove that he ranks with such versatile ring immortals as Bob Fitzsimmons or Joe Walcott. Perhaps, he may do so.
